Q: Setting the default properties for files in Mercurial I am a big fan of using Mercurial, and I find it great. However, one thing I have found lacking is the ability to specify the default values that some Mercurial operations will use for files. As a simple example, let's say I have a file called footer.html. It has no version history, and I need to put the title of the document at the top, and a copyright notice at the bottom. If I was using SVN, I would want to use a.hgtags file with something like this: - title Copyright In Mercurial, the tag name is ruleset and the file to use for setting defaults is.hgtags. I would set this file up like this: * css/foo.css * css/bar.css * css/quux.css - title Copyright What I would like to be able to do is use the same rule set to set the defaults for all my files, so that the tag line is still included for each one. Is there a way to do this? A: You need to use the templating system that comes with Mercurial, hgtags. As you point out, the default way of applying the template tags via hg tags is by using a file with the name.hgtags. This isn't very convenient, so there's an alternative, using template commands. The first thing to do is to make a file named templates/.hgtags, where you put everything you want to be able to use in your templates: - title Copyright You can then enable templating by using hg tag -t templates Now you can use the templating file as you've been using hg tags: e.g. * css/foo.css * css/bar.css * css/quux.css - title Copyright Committing this file will ensure that it gets applied to newly-created files, because it gets created in the.hgtags directory. As a side note, I use a quite different set
