Okay, maybe the four things above are a bit of hyperbole, but such is the lifestyle-obsessed world of "The Weekly World News." Though it's not exactly a weekly publication, the newspaper has to be one of the most influential creations in the history of media, first published in 1982 and syndicated by WORLD News Service to hundreds of papers throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico, perhaps the only semi-satirical paper to have an international reputation. Its final edition of this century, no. 371, was published Monday, after readers reported on the Internet that the paper had suddenly disappeared. The title and masthead were neatly placed on the front page, but that was it - the message from editor Zander Lehrer that he's "gone out of business" also bled through: "This comes as an enormous shock to all of us." e79caf774b
