I'm trying to export a component from an Angular 2 module to another Angular 2 module, using Angular CLI. I've declared the variable path (temporarily) in the first module and it's fine. I can see it in the console when I inspect the variables and the value of it is fine too. When I try to use it in the component of the other module, it doesn't show up. I've tried to declare the variable in the first module like this: declare var path; also, declared path a const instead of var. This is the path declaration in the first module: declare const path: string; This is the path declaration in the other module: import { path } from '././app.module'; In the first module the path variable is fine, but it's not in the second one. Any idea why? My declared path: Screenshot from Angular CLI in the 'app.module.ts' of the first module: Screenshot from Angular CLI in the 'news.module.ts' of the first module: Appreciate any kind of help. A: You need to add the path value to the exports of the top level module. From the Angular docs: Paths are always scoped to a particular file. They will not be exported to the global object. Angular cannot distinguish what variable is desired, from what module the variable is desired. And this is exactly how Angular isolates its components in the first place. Decl

Features Key:

- Goal Systems are designed to be more responsive, effective and are tailored to each mode of play. In men's football matches, players will score a goal through a wide variety of different play types. In addition, players will be able to score long-range goals from distance by beating their marker, while goalkeepers will have the added ability to pull off acrobatic saves to foil onrushing opponents.

EA SPORTS FIFA is the definitive sports franchise, built on a technology-first foundation and bringing the sport into a new era. Where does FIFA come from? FIFA is the world's most popular sports videogame. We've been developing FIFA since 1991, and revolutionizing the franchise since 1996. How is FIFA different from other sports games? EA SPORTS FIFA is a true test of skill and physical endurance. Players compete to be the best on and off the pitch. EA SPORTS FIFA's Player Intelligence How do players make the most of the game? The game's real-time engine delivers the ultimate endurance test, with realistic, open-ended matches, driven by AI, physics and real-world rules and conditions. The game lets you control the outcome of the match with Player Intelligence. AI can analyse opponents, scout for weaknesses and utilise the flow of the match to dictate its tempo, using anticipation, rotations and movements to attack or defend. Inside the Stats screen, Player Intelligence can also scout the opposition and analyse different match situations for you. EA SPORTS FIFA Trainer How do you complete challenges and unlock the best players? Challenges are the core of FIFA, each delivered by a new franchise mode focused on a single style of play. The most popular challenges are represented by Championships, represented by seasons. Players compete for real in-game prizes and unlock player cards that can be used to build a dream-team. To compete, players can take part in weekly tournaments based on their chosen championships. EA SPORTS FIFA Ultimate Team What is FIFA Ultimate Team? Ultimate Team is the ultimate way to manage your squad. As a player, you can scout for new talent using Pro Clubs in the transfer market. You can also fill your Reserve Team with training players using EA SPORTS FIFA Points. EA SPORTS FIFA Ultimate Team has its own player characteristics and any players you buy and coach with will remember your allegiance. And you can create dream squads on a league-by-league basis. Pro Clubs can be organised in a variety of ways – from your favourite players' individual statistics to your favourite team's placement over time. FIFA Street, FIFA World, and EA SPORTS FIFA 18 Mobile are also part of the FIFA Ultimate Team Series. How can you play Ultimate Team? The bc9d6d6daa
