Major emphasis is placed on elucidating the molecular biology of hypertrophic and "dystrophic" muscle. Genetic analysis of familial hypertrophic myopathy and of muscle fibers (dystrophic and normal) is also explored, in the perspective of discovering new mechanisms of regulation of muscle growth and maintenance. Specific research interests include the study of genetic, biochemical and molecular genetic regulation of muscle cell proliferation and differentiation, and on muscle disease. Major efforts are directed towards the study of the cell biology of muscle cell proliferation and differentiation and toward the development of experimental models of muscle disease.
