Memory Trigger is a Choices Matter + Inferior Motivation System game that takes you on a journey of self-discovery that isn't so much about choosing what to do, but deciding what to do with the choices you do make.Memory Trigger features three unique locations, in which each room or area has a distinct look and feel, including a haunted "Cabin" of a building, a "Bedroom" featuring a lush garden outside, and an "Inn" that features a romantic roof-top overlooking a lake.Each area features different objectives to accomplish, as well as different protagonists (humanoids and non-humanoid) to interact with, all of whom will have a distinct dialogue system.The three locations are linked to one another by memory triggers scattered throughout the city, allowing you to explore each location and forge new bonds with the people you meet in each room. Choose your associates carefully -- certain people may return to you in future locations, and each person holds a different piece of information that will have a direct impact on your future.Vaguely references to a love triangle.Some references to my own life. On Elm Street 5: The Dream Child BLADESTORM: Nightmare On Elm Street 5: The Dream Child is a 2010 American slasher film, a direct-to-video sequel to 2010's Bladestorm: The Hundred or More Years of Justine. The Plot In the town of Littleton, Colorado, three police officers, Officer Will Kemp (Seth Green), Officer Kendra Fischer (Natalie Bilandic) and Chief Joseph Menge (Bill Oberst Jr.), are led to the scene of a murder in the woods behind the local high school, Elm Street High School. The three of them find a bloody decapitated body in a nearby field, with a baseball bat nearby. Menge notes that the killer had a Beretta 84 handgun with him. Still not certain whether the killer is human or demonic (as both are known to exist in that town), the police decide to lock down the students inside the school. Officer Kendra and Officer Zevin Ford (Jarek King) join Officer Will and Officer David Bates (Ray Wise) on the perimeter, while Joey (Jamar Taylor), a teenager whom Kendra had seen last in medical school, stays behind to watch over the female students on the other side of the school. Inside the school, a student named Toby Loves is in his last year of high school. Only a few days earlier, he saw a strangely dressed man dressed in old clothes and wielding a baseball bat on the side of the road. When the strange man boarded his bus, Toby started a rumor about him being a demon. Despite the mild harassment of this rumor, Toby has developed a crush on Angelique (Jessie C. Zarak), which prompts Kurt (Derrick J. Freeman) to warn her. Toby sees the bat-wielding stranger again, just to see what he does. When they get off the bus, Toby confronts the strange man with his words and a car drives up, hitting the strange man and hurling him into the air. The man's costume and style now make him recognizable to Toby and everyone else on the bus. Everyone except Kurt, who sits across from him, is frightened by the strange man. After the accident, the strange man reverses course and skates away from the scene, leaving all the terrified students on the bus still traumatized, with the exception of Kurt. Inside the school gym, Kurt and a girl named Kimberly Lawrence, who skipped middle school due to poor

#The story of NightCat Studios. Our creative pioneers have been dreaming of creating a new kind of game. A game that would show the other sides of war, a game that would present to us the whole puzzle of the world of combat and struggle. And in 2016 we have founded NCS studio. While we do our best to take all necessary steps to make our project come true, there are tough battles to come. #Buy this game and help us in the fight for Ukraine! #Introduction.
