Although aneurysmectomy is the gold standard treatment, percutaneous coronary intervention (PCI) is an alternative treatment method. However, antiplatelet therapy should be continued for 12 months after PCI. Antiplatelet therapy with stents is the standard therapy for in-stent restenosis, and the risk of stent thrombosis remains high. We report a case of a 78-year-old woman with a giant coronary aneurysm who presented with STEMI. Submucosal implantation of a drug-eluting stent (DES) in the aneurysm was performed.
