The scale for the system should be optimized for the small streets or hard-surfaced roads and of conventional traffic flow, where the necessary volume of the required number of lanes on the road surface is in line with that of the space available on the road surface. The purpose of the highway system, however, is not primarily to ensure optimum pedestrian circulation. It is possible to make an assumption that the purpose of the highway system is to provide vehicles the optimum transport capacity in order to be able to connect large urban areas over a wider area with lower costs than would be possible by the local roads. A novel electrochemical sensor based on a poly(2,2'-dimethoxy-5,5'-bibenzimidazole-4,4'-dione) (PDMBI) co-immobilized with poly(vinylbenzyl chloride) (PVBC) modified gold electrode was developed. The electrochemical properties of PDMBI on PVBC film were characterized by cyclic voltammetry (CV) and differential pulse voltammetry (DPV). At the glassy carbon electrode, an excellent electrocatalytic oxidation behavior of PDMBI at an overpotential of approximately 225 mV was observed. Meanwhile, a large current was detected by the sensor by applying DPV technique. Under optimal conditions, the
