Google Books Download. Here is a link to the book "Images of The Body in the History of Medicine (2002). google books is a digital library of books.This invention pertains to a method and apparatus for reproducing an image of an image and/or text portion on a substrate using a plurality of sets of substrate heating and cooling rollers. It pertains particularly to an improved method of obtaining a proper reproduction at high speeds on overhead transparencies. Overhead projectors are used for presentation of slides in various technical and nontechnical meetings, seminars, etc. An overhead projector commonly includes a housing having a slide tray for holding a stack of slides, a transport mechanism for advancing the slides past a projector aperture, a slide projector aperture, a brightness or darkness control and an output aperture for projecting the images of the slides onto a viewing surface for the audience. The images are formed at the side of a projection lens where the light is collimated and passed through the lens aperture and redirected through the brightness control aperture. A screen is situated beyond the brightness control. Automation of slide projection, however, presents a number of challenges. While it is of paramount importance to accurately reproduce the slides, the speed of the presentation often is a factor in the overall success of the meeting. In the past, the slides were manually loaded into the slide projector and the slide projector control aperture was manually selected for the slide with the greatest brightness for projection. The slide projector was operated for a sufficient amount of time to make the slide visible. While this method works, it takes a considerable amount of time, and therefore, the slides must be carefully sorted and a single slide selected for projection. As the speed of projection increased, the amount of time necessary to change slides between presentations was so great as to be significant. Consequently, attempts have been made to simplify the mechanism. The foregoing method can be automated by moving the slide projector to and positioning the slide projector aperture over a slide which is to be projected. The projector is manually operated to project the slide for the desired time and the apparatus is removed. Manual operation is slow, however, and requires the attention of the presenters to the slides and the slides to the viewers. It is a feature of the present invention to provide a novel method and apparatus for reliably reproducing images on slides at high speed. It is another feature of the present invention to provide a novel system for reproducing images on slides using heating and cooling rollers. It is still another feature of the present invention

For example: A serial number of 4000 as a last name and 513 as a month of birth would be: (438)(425)(5)(13) Get a Display Serial Number A serial number is an identification number that defines a model. If you own a computer or mobile device, one of the first things you want to do is identify your device. If you don't know what your device's serial number is, you'll need to purchase service from your manufacturer or the retailer you purchased it from. Read on to get the steps to get your display serial number. Finding Your Device's Serial Number You can find your device's serial number on the back of your device. If it's a desktop computer, it will most likely have a sticker on the back of the computer with the serial number. If it's a mobile device, it'll most likely be printed on the back of the device. Identifying Your Device's Serial Number on a Desktop Computer If you find a sticker on the back of a desktop computer, it's most likely in the upper left-hand corner. You can usually pull off the sticker and see the serial number there. To remove the sticker, you need to use a sharp knife. Pull the blade of the knife along the adhesive and it should come off. If you have difficulty getting the sticker off, get some solvent or acetone and use a clean cloth to get it off. If it's stuck really hard, you may need to use a grinder. Identifying Your Device's Serial Number on a Mobile Phone If you find a sticker on the back of a mobile device, it will most likely be in the upper left-hand corner or in a window on the back of the device. You can use a small stick to remove the sticker and look at the serial number. If the window on the back of the device is too small, you can use a pen to remove the sticker. Download This App Having trouble finding your display serial number? Some app stores won't allow you to download the app to your mobile phone until you get your display serial number. In order to get your display serial number, you'll need to: Make sure your device is switched on Open the Settings on your phone and go to About Phone
