To make these cards easy to print, I have placed them in three separate posts:The present invention relates to an improvement in a water-cooling type liquid injection type gas compressor which can efficiently and reliably inject cooling water into a high-temperature compressor discharge gas. In a conventional water-cooling type liquid injection type gas compressor, cooling water is generally supplied by a cooling water feeding means to a water passage formed in an expansion chamber side cylinder of a compressor. The cooling water is sprayed to the interior of the cylinder through a multiplicity of spray holes formed in a cylinder head and is then returned to the cooling water feeding means. The cooling water passage, which extends from the cooling water feeding means to the water passage, is desirably constructed such that the water does not flow back to the cooling water feeding means by causing a local reflux therein, because of the loss of cooling water which occurs when a certain amount of the cooling water is returned to the cooling water feeding means. As a means for avoiding such a reflux, Japanese Utility Model Publication (kokoku) No. 59-1381 discloses a cooling water passage which includes a first section extending from a cooling water feeding means to an inlet port of a water passage, a second section extending from the inlet port of the water passage to a suction port of a cylinder side cylinder, and a third section connecting the second section to a fourth section extending from the inlet port to the cooling water feeding means, so as to form a closed loop with a passageway therebetween. Although the arrangement of the above cooling water passage
